

Innings Acquires Sue's Home Care, Supporting the Next Chapter of a Trusted Sydney Home Care Provider

Innings has acquired Sue's Home Care, a premium, clinically led home care provider based in Sydney, which has spent more than a decade supporting Australians to remain in their own homes as they age.

Founded over 12 years ago, Sue's Home Care has grown organically through reputation and referral rather than promotion. The business is recognised for its registered nurse-led model, structured long-term care planning, and strong continuity of carers - an approach that prioritises dignity, stability, and trust for clients and their families.

The acquisition reflects Innings' focus on supporting well-run health businesses that play a meaningful role in their communities and are built to last.

"Sue's Home Care is a business that has been built patiently and with genuine care for people," said Ryan Ebert, Founder of Innings. "We're pleased to support the next chapter of a service that helps Australians remain in their own home and get the most out of later living."

Operating in the premium home care market, Sue's Home Care serves clients who value consistency, clinical oversight, and personalised support. The business is well positioned as more Australians choose ageing in place over institutional care, supported by strong demographic and social trends.

Following the acquisition, Innings' focus will be on continuity - supporting carers and clinical leadership, maintaining care standards, and building on the culture that has underpinned the business's success to date.

Over time, Innings intends to grow its impact thoughtfully in the home care sector, expanding access to high-quality services while staying true to the principles on which Sue's Home Care was built.

"In care, trust is everything," Ebert added. "Our role is to support what already works well and ensure the business continues to serve clients and families with the same level of care and commitment into the future."

Inspired by the ethos of cricket, Innings was founded to continue the innings of Australia's great small and mid-sized businesses. With Sue's Home Care, that philosophy is now focused on supporting a trusted provider through its next chapter in later living.
